L2M Hires Two New Employees
Baltimore-Based Architecture Firm Hires Two Designers

BALTIMORE – July 14, 2008 – L2M, a nationally recognized architecture and foodservice design firm with expertise in retail, travel and leisure and health care design, announced the hire of Jack Lyle and Jeanne Schleicher, both as designers. Lyle and Schleicher will join the commercial & institutional and retail design studios, respectively. Building upon the firm’s success in these markets, both designers will assist in the development of projects regionally and nationally, working with clients such as JoS. A. Bank Clothiers, Perfumania, Weingarten Realty Investments and Coram Health Care.

A graduate of Newark College of Engineering in Newark, N.J., Lyle has worked as a project and production architect across the mid-Atlantic region for more than 27 years. Most recently, Lyle served as a project architect for Shalom Baranes Associates in Washington, D.C. Originally from Newark, N.J., Lyle now resides in Washington, D.C.

Schleicher is currently a student at Morgan State University where she recently received the 2008 Research and Travel Scholarship from AIA Baltimore. Established to encourage and assist outstanding, upper-level students, the scholarship allowed Schleicher to travel to Boston and New York to study the architecture of mixed-income housing communities.

Schleicher is a member of Architecture for Humanity and the National Building Museum Corinthian. A life-long Maryland resident, Schleicher resides in Glen Burnie.

“A vital part of L2M’s practice is the collaborative process. It allows us to create a detailed bridge between the planning and execution stages of a project,” said Jeffrey Mahler, L2M principal and co-founder. “Both Jack and Jeanne’s talents help us showcase our unique design approach as the projects come to life—perfecting the collaborative aspect of the interface with the project team ensures we continue to provide our clients with innovative yet functional spaces.”
